

I agree that multiple applications by the same person for the same vanity call sign should not be allowed on the same day. Since the application selection process for any given day is random, submitting multiple applications increases the probability that that person will be granted the call, and therefore it becomes a contest of who can submit the most applications (and therefore who is willing to spend the most money). I see this as a loophole in the system, making it unfair and costly for the FCC in terms of paperwork/computer resources and refund administration.
